

Oregon Country Fair Grievance Process

The Oregon Country Fair grievance process is a formal process established specifically for situations in which the OCF written guidelines or policies have been violated and you have been adversely impacted. If you're not able to otherwise resolve the situation, then you may file a formal grievance.

Table of Contents

The Pre-Grievance Steps	1
Introduction - Conflict Response at the Fair	3
Definitions of Grievance Terms	5
Pre-Grievance Steps - Before Formally Filing a Grievance	5
The Role of the Grievance Administrator	7
How to File a Grievance	8
Grievance Process Level One – Restorative Justice	8
Grievance Process Level Two - Arbitration	11
Grievance Process Level Three - Appeal	13
Summary of Grievance Process with Time Limits	14
Oregon Country Fair Grievance Form	17

Outline of the Grievance Process

An overview of conflict response at the fair and the approach used in OCF's grievance process.
Read definitions of grievance terms.

Before filing a grievance, follow the pre-grievance steps.

Step 1) Try to talk with the respondent. If talking face to face is difficult, ask for help from a mutual friend, a trusted elder, or ask for mediation or conflict coaching from CeDaR, or camping mediation crew. If that does not resolve it, Step 2) Reach out to an OCF fair leader for help. If that does not resolve it, Step 3) Notify the grievance administrator.

The grievant will need to allow time to work through these pre-grievance steps while remaining within the 60 day time limit for filing a grievance. Therefore, grievants should start these pre-grievance steps as soon as possible after the event giving rise to a possible grievance.

The grievance administrator may not admit a complaint into the grievance process if

- the grievant did not attempt to work it out informally with a leader before filing,
- the grievance is not filed within the 60 day time limit, or
- the grievant does not allege facts that if true would violate OCF written guidelines or policies.

Click here for more detailed information about the role of the grievance administrator.

File a Grievance See how to file a grievance.

The Three Levels of the Grievance Process

After the grievance form is filed with the grievance administrator, there may be up to three main levels in the grievance process. Click on each level below for more detailed information.

Level 1) Restorative Justice, a process intended to heal and resolve, Level 2) Arbitration, a process to be used if it is not resolved by Restorative Justice, and Level 3) Appeal to management, used if there was an error in the administration of the process.

Most grievances will resolve in Level One (Restorative Justice) without the need to go to other levels.

Every year the grievance process is on hiatus (with rare exceptions) from June 1st through July 31st .

Hiatus days will not be counted when calculating time limits. The yearly grievance process hiatus does not preclude filing paperwork, working with fair leaders to try to resolve it, using CeDaR's services for either mediation or conflict coaching, or holding a Restorative Justice meeting as long as the parties are in agreement about using that time in that way.

All parties have a duty to cooperate and must follow this grievance process and comply with all rules and rulings made in accordance with this process. Failure of the grievant to cooperate could result in finding for the respondent. Failure of the respondent to cooperate could result in a finding for the grievant.

Click here for a summary of all time limits in the grievance process.

This grievance process and the grievance form can be found at www.oregoncountryfair.net under Documents. Any questions can be emailed to the OCF's grievance administrator at grievance@oregoncountryfair.org.

Introduction - Conflict Response at the Fair

While OCF aims to provide a safe, friendly and family-like atmosphere for all participants, we recognize there are situations in which conflicts can and do occur. Conflict is all around us. It is a part of every day and every relationship. While conflict can be uncomfortable, it can and often does lead to positive or transformative outcomes when people are willing to talk it out. For folks who want things to improve, it can be helpful to have assistance with those difficult conversations. Over the years OCF has developed and nurtured a number of teams who specialize in providing help when fair family members find themselves in conflict.

When help with conflict is requested, the team who helps will be based on the circumstances of the conflict. For example, if a conflict is between fair family and a neighboring property owner, the NeRTs (Neighborhood Response Team) are called into action. Conflicts involving camping or other placement issues are handled by the Camping crew mediation team. Interpersonal conflicts between fair family members that do not involve placement issues go to the CeDaR conflict resolution team. Other teams that assist with conflicts include White Bird (who provides crisis intervention, counseling, etc.), Security, Back-Up Managers (BUMs), or fair staff, depending on the circumstances.

The fair's grievance process is a place to find help for a very specific kind of conflict that involves violation of a fair rule or guideline. It's important to understand the difference between this type of conflict and others. In a grievance-related conflict, a fair rule has allegedly been broken that has resulted in adverse impact on others and there could be consequences for the person who broke the rules.

In the "unfair" world, people who violate rules are often punished. Many of our most basic institutions are built around this idea of punishing violators, including the court system, school discipline procedures, and even many families use punishment as a tool to change behavior. But there is a sea change around the world where people are starting to realize that punishment, which is an external short-term motivator, doesn't really work as well as we would like. It often leaves the rule-breaker angry and ashamed, and it rarely meaningfully addresses the needs of those who have been impacted by the wrongful behavior.

The fair through its grievance process is choosing a different path. Rather than focusing on guilt and punishment, the fair's grievance process is designed to help the person who caused harm think about how their actions have impacted others through a Restorative Justice process. It gives them an opportunity to step up and own what they did and take personal responsibility for making things right again. The people who have been harmed have an important role in deciding what that will look like. In the end a person often feels good about taking responsibility to fix things, and the harmed people are often more satisfied because their needs were addressed in a meaningful way.

This approach comes from ancient and traditional methods used by indigenous peoples in many parts of the world. The Restorative Justice process, also often called "Healing Justice," leads to a healing of spirit and a healing of relationships in our community. The fair partners with the Center for Dialogue and Resolution (CDR), a Eugene nonprofit agency that has been providing Restorative Justice services to the local courts and schools for over 30 years. CDR is represented at the fair as the CeDaR Team which also provides free mediation and conflict coaching to fair family members for fair-related conflicts.

Of course, this Restorative Justice approach won't work for all situations, such as when the person who caused harm is unwilling to participate in the dialogue or unwilling to own their mistakes. In those situations, the grievance process will change to a different approach, arbitration, that can result in some form of consequences. Arbitration would ideally be the last resort.

Click here to return home to the Process Outline.

Definitions of Grievance Terms

- a. Grievance refers to any dispute regarding an alleged violation of any written policy in OCF's articles of incorporation, by-laws, guidelines or code of conduct.
- b. Grievant is who is filing the grievance.
- c. Respondent is who the grievant claims violated our Articles of Incorporation, By-Laws, Guidelines or Code of Conduct.
- d. BUM stands for Back Up Manager; a member of the management team.
- e. CeDaR refers to the fair team that provides conflict coaching, empathetic listening, mediation, restorative justice and restorative training and facilitation services to OCF. CeDaR is a volunteer-run group, housed within the Center for Dialogue and Resolution (CDR) which is located in Eugene, Oregon. CeDaR's booth is located in the tail of the dragon in Dragon Plaza.
- f. Restorative Justice is a meeting that provides safe opportunities for dialogue, and enables individuals impacted by a violation of our policies to come together with those responsible for it so they can participate together in a process to repair harm by creating a Restorative Action Plan together. Restorative Justice facilitators are neutral professionals with extensive, deep training who provide a process for the grievant and respondent to reach their own mutually achieved resolution of the grievance.
- g. Arbitrators are fair family members trained to listen to the grievant and respondent and any witnesses in an arbitration hearing, engaging in information gathering and analysis, and then deciding for the parties how the grievance will be resolved.

Click here to return home to the Process Outline.

Pre-Grievance Steps - Before Formally Filing a Grievance

Pre-grievance Step 1 - Talk it out, ask for help. The grievant will first try talking to the respondent. If you aren't successful with step one, feel uncomfortable engaging the other person, or just want some coaching on how to approach the conflict, you might ask someone else for help. This could be someone else on your team, a trusted advisor, or a friend in common. Someone from the Grievance Administration group is also always a resource. Ideally you would choose an individual with the skills to help you formulate a plan to address the issue directly with the other person. This might include role playing the exchange for example. In some cases they might play a role in your conversations with the individual you are having difficulty with. Contacting someone for help is most effective when it's in the spirit of a win-win outcome in the conflict and not about gossip or trash talking.

Below are a few online resources to help you prepare for your constructive conversations:

Use Non-violent communication, "I" statements, and other good communication practices.

Human Intervention training by Zak Schwartz and Brad Lerch

Own Your Behaviours, Master Your Communication, Determine Your Success | Louise Evans

How to Deal with Difficult People

[List of formal supports, conflict coaching, management team, CeDaR, Humanistic Intervention trainers, Camping Mediation Crew, White Bird, - define types of conflicts]

If talking face to face is difficult, they may use CeDaR or other mediation teams such as camping and NRT to help them have a productive conversation in a safe space. They can also get conflict coaching from the same sources, a trusted elder, or other fair leaders. CeDaR provides this valuable fair resource which is available to any fair family members needing help with fair-related conflict. Contact CeDaR@oregoncountryfair.org to arrange for these services. You may be able to resolve the conflict here and not progress further through the grievance steps.

Pre-grievance Step 2 - Reach out to a fair leader. The grievant will ask an authority figure such as a BUM (Back Up Manager), crew coordinator, booth rep, Facebook group admin, or other appropriate fair leader who is neutral to the conflict for help in resolving the situation. The leader may also recommend or rely on CeDaR support services while working on resolution. Sometimes a written complaint might be required. It is likely that your grievance will be resolved with the help of a fair leader and/or CeDaR. If the conflict is resolved, you do not need to file a grievance.

Pre-grievance Step 3 - Notify the grievance administrator. If you resolve your conflict in pre-grievance Step 1 or 2, you do not need to file a grievance. If you are not able to resolve it, contact the grievance administrator at grievance@oregoncountryfair.org and file a grievance.

Click here to return home to the Process OutlineThumbnail page.

The Role of the Grievance Administrator

The grievance administrator will serve as a guide to the grievance process for the grievant, the respondent, Restorative Justice facilitators and the arbitrators. The grievance administrator will not serve as a Restorative Justice facilitator or as an arbitrator. The grievance administrator will not be involved in deciding the outcome of a grievance. The grievance administrator's role will be to give advice and counsel regarding the process, and to facilitate the orderly flow of paperwork associated with a grievance.

The grievance administrator will maintain grievance forms available online at www.oregoncountryfair.net under Forms or by request at the OCF office. Grievance forms can also be mailed or emailed to fair family members if requested.

The grievance administrator will maintain a list of trained and approved arbitrators to call upon. The grievance administrator has the power to remove persons from the list of arbitrators if those arbitrators fail to comply with the requirements of this process or OCF guidelines. Through the grievance administrator, OCF will provide a thorough yearly training for arbitrators so that trained arbitrators will be available when needed.

The grievance administrator will archive the written decisions of arbitration councils.

The grievance administrator will fulfill the responsibilities of the grievance administrator's role at each step of the grievance process and any failure to do so will extend any deadlines missed as a result of such failure.

Click here to return home to the Process Outline.

How to File a Grievance

Fill out a grievance form, which can also be found at oregoncountryfair.net under Documents, Grievance Form.

The time limit to file a grievance is within 60 days of the event that gave rise to the grievance, or within 60 days of the grievant becoming aware of the grievable event. The 60-day time frame relies on the date stamp on the mailed or emailed grievance form. Grievance forms must be either mailed or emailed. They can be mailed by first class mail to the grievance administrator at Oregon Country Fair, 442 Lawrence St., Eugene, OR 97401 or emailed to grievance@oregoncountryfair.org. If there are questions related to filing a grievance, email the grievance administrator at grievance@oregoncountryfair.org.

The grievance administrator will send a copy of the grievance form to the respondent within 15 days of receiving it by email or first class mail. The grievance administrator will contact CeDaR within 15 days to start the process for Level One of the grievance process – Restorative Justice. The grievance administrator will also contact the Executive Director so they are aware of the issue and can be helpful in resolving it if possible.

If the grievance administrator or top management person is party to a grievance, appropriate backup people will be assigned to take those roles as needed so that no one who is party to a grievance will be involved in administering the grievance process for that grievance.

Click here to return home to the Process Outline.

Grievance Process Level One – Restorative Justice

A Restorative Justice orientation meeting will be scheduled once the grievance administrator refers the case to CeDaR. The case manager will contact the respondent to schedule the orientation. The purpose of the orientation is to explain the Restorative Justice process and its benefits, then invite the respondent to participate. The orientation can be conducted in person, over the phone or online, depending on the circumstances.

The Restorative Justice orientation meeting must occur within 30 days of the referral date. If the respondent is unreachable, fails to participate in the required orientation, or upon invitation after the orientation chooses not to participate further, the case will be sent back to the grievance administrator who will then begin Level Two of the grievance process, arbitration.

If the respondent chooses to participate in the Restorative Justice process, the case manager will explore with the respondent the events that occurred that led to a grievance complaint, and how the grievant and perhaps others may have been impacted by those events. The respondent will also be invited to begin thinking about how they might address the needs of those people who were impacted, with the goal of making things right. In a post-orientation follow-up, the case manager may also reach out to the grievant and others who may have been impacted, and might circle back to the respondent if needed.

After the orientation, the case manager will work with everyone to schedule the Restorative Justice meeting within 60 days of the date the case was first referred to CeDaR.

The purpose of the Restorative Justice meeting is to safely and fully explore the events that led to grievance complaint, paying particular attention to those people who may have been harmed or negatively impacted by these events, and then giving the respondent an opportunity to mend the harms by agreeing to a Restorative Action Plan that all the participants create together.

Participants in a Restorative Justice meeting may include the following. The meeting will be facilitated by the case manager, who may be assisted by up to two additional trained facilitators. The respondent is the only other person required to attend, but the meeting participants may also include the grievant, any others who were also impacted, one or more representatives from the fair family at large, and possibly others if needed for a reason related to their situation. This would include the option for the respondent and grievant each to bring a support person with them if needed. Support persons generally do not participate in the dialogue, but can provide silent support during the meeting and additional supports during breaks. The support person should not be a direct witness to facts underlying the grievance.

There will be a strong preference for in-person Restorative Justice meetings when possible, but video conferencing may be approved in some circumstances.

Facilitator neutrality is integral to the process. If either the grievant or respondent perceive that a facilitator is unable to be impartial, the concern should be brought to the facilitator's attention. After a discussion about the issue, and if the facilitator is unable to alleviate the party's concern, then either that facilitator should excuse themselves from the meeting (if one or more facilitators are still present) or the meeting will be postponed to a future date with a different facilitator.

Restorative Justice meetings are confidential. The participants will all pledge to keep the discussions confidential, unless they all agree otherwise. However, the Restorative Action Plan that participants create together will not be confidential and will be provided to the Executive Director and others as appropriate.

Additional Restorative Justice meetings may be necessary to resolve all of the issues. If that's the case, the next meeting date will be agreed to prior to ending the current meeting. The next meeting date will be within 30 days of the current meeting. If additional meetings are required beyond that, they will each have the same 30 day window, until either the Restorative Action Plan is agreed to or the participants and facilitators determine that no resolution is possible, at which point the case will be referred back to the grievance administrator who will move the case to Level Two of the grievance process, arbitration.

When participants reach agreement on a Restorative Action Plan, the respondent will have a specified amount of time from the date of their final Restorative Justice meeting to complete the steps they agreed to take.

While the respondent is working on the steps in their Restorative Action Plan, they must check in with the case manager monthly by email to report on their progress. Failure to provide a monthly progress report may result in the case being referred back to the grievance administrator for arbitration.

When the respondent successfully completes all the steps in their Restorative Action Plan within specified and agreed upon time period, the grievance will be dismissed and no further action will be taken by the fair.

If the respondent fails to complete all the steps in their Restorative Action Plan within the specified time frame, the case will be referred back to the grievance administrator who will move the case to Level Two of the grievance process, arbitration.

Click here to return home to the Process Outline.

Grievance Process Level Two - Arbitration

If the grievance is not resolved by the parties in Level One – Restorative Justice, the case manager will alert the grievance administrator who will contact the grievant within 15 days to find out if the grievant wants to proceed to Level Two - Arbitration where a council of arbitrators will decide for them how to resolve it, or close the grievance.

Within 15 days, the grievant will alert the grievance administrator by phone or email at grievance@oregoncountryfair.org if they want to move forward to Level Two of the grievance process. If the grievant does not do so within 15 days, the grievance administrator may close the grievance.

If so, within 15 days of finding out the grievant wants to proceed to Level Two - Arbitration, the grievance administrator will provide a list of trained, capable, willing and available arbitrators to each of the parties. Each party will choose one arbitrator from the list. If there is a name on the list that a party does not want as an arbitrator, the party will cross off that one name. Parties will return their choices to the grievance administrator within 15 days. The grievance administrator will select the two arbitrators, using the parties' choices and avoiding any name that has been crossed off. If both parties choose the same name, the grievance administrator will choose a second name. If one of the parties chooses a name that the other party has crossed off, then the grievance administrator will choose the second name, avoiding any name that has been crossed off. The grievance administrator will alert the chosen arbitrators of their selection.

Within 15 days, the two chosen arbitrators will choose a third arbitrator from the list who will act as the lead arbitrator on the arbitrator council. Within the same time period, the grievance administrator will send to the arbitrators a copy of the grievance and any written position statements prepared by the parties.

Once the arbitrator council has been selected, the arbitrators will work together to schedule the arbitration hearing with the parties. If the arbitrators and parties are unable to come to an agreement on a date and time and location within 15 days, the grievance administrator will choose for them. The date scheduled for the arbitration hearing will be no more than 30 days after the arbitrator council has been selected.

Arbitrators will not discuss the case with parties before the arbitration hearing in order to maintain fairness to all parties. The parties may not contact the arbitrators before they are contacted by the arbitrators. All communications between parties and arbitrators before the arbitration hearing will center on scheduling and not on matters pertaining to the grievance or the other party. After deciding on a day and time and location, the arbitrators will send that information to the parties by email or first-class mail.

Each party involved in a grievance may designate a support person to accompany them during an arbitration. Such a designation must be made in writing and be submitted before the scheduled meeting. The notice should include the name, mailing address, email address and phone number of the support person. The grievance administrator will share the support person's name and contact information with the arbitrators in advance of their meeting. The support person should not be a direct witness to facts underlying the grievance. The grievant and respondent are expected to participate in good faith and speak on their own behalf during the arbitration hearing. Other participants will be provided opportunities to share their perspectives in accordance with the arbitration process.

The exact length of the arbitration and the number of witnesses each side will be allowed will be determined by the arbitrator council after consulting with the parties. Both sides will be allowed an equal amount of time to present their positions.

After completing the arbitration hearing, the arbitrators will decide on the resolution. Any resolution agreed to by two or more of the arbitrators will be the decision of the arbitrator council. The arbitrator council will notify the grievance administrator of its draft decision in writing within 15 days of the arbitration hearing at grievance@oregoncountryfair.org. This notice will include the decision about any disputed facts and a statement of the council's rationale for its decision.

The grievance administrator will share the draft decision with appropriate OCF management to allow consideration of any legal or operational ramifications of the arbitrator council's decision. If potential problems are identified, the arbitrators will consider adjusting the consequences contained in their decision so that they do not unintentionally create legal or operational problems. All reviews and revisions should be completed within 30 days of the start of management review.

The arbitration council's final decision will be sent to the parties by certified mail within 15 days of OCF management review. The final decision of the arbitration council is binding on the parties unless management grants a request for appeal.

Arbitration hearings are confidential. Arbitrators and participants will pledge not to share what was said or how parties behaved in an arbitration hearing. Parties may share the written decision if they decide to, but arbitrators will not share their experience or final decision except in general terms for debrief or training purposes.

Arbitrators are selected from a list of trained and approved arbitrators maintained by the grievance administrator. Arbitrators are people who listen to the parties and then decide what the resolution of the grievance will be. They must be impartial parties to the grievance. In order to qualify as an arbitrator in the grievance process, a person must complete an arbitrator training program sponsored by the Oregon Country Fair. Fair family members wishing to be on the arbitrator list may notify the grievance administrator at grievance@oregoncountryfair.org.

Click here to return home to the Process Outline.

Grievance Process Level Three - Appeal

Within 30 days of receiving the Arbitrator Council's written decision, either party may appeal to management asking that they review the decision of the arbitrator council. The petition to hear the appeal must be in writing and must be postmarked or hand delivered to the OCF office at 442 Lawrence St., Eugene, OR 97401 or emailed to the grievance administrator at grievance@oregoncountryfair.org within those 30 days.

The petition to hear the appeal should include the following:

- a statement of the error made leading to this appeal,
- a statement of why management should hear this appeal,
- a copy of the person's grievance,
- and a copy of the arbitration council's decision.

Within 15 days of receiving the petition to hear the appeal, the grievance administrator will send it to OCF management. Within 15 days of when the petition is received at the OCF office, management will decide whether to grant the petition to hear the appeal. Management's decision is final.

If management decides to grant the petition to hear the appeal, then the appeal will be heard by management within 30 days of when it grants the petition. All parties to the appeal may submit a written statement of their position and may have a limited and defined amount of time for an oral presentation to management.

Management's decision will be sent to the parties in writing within 30 days of hearing the appeal. Management's decision will be final.

Click here to return home to the Process Outline.

Summary of Grievance Process with Time Limits

a. Within 60 days of a grievable event, grievant will:

- try to work it out with respondent,
- ask for help from an OCF person of authority, and
- may file a grievance if no resolution has been reached (see pre-grievance steps page).

b. Within 15 days of receiving the grievance, grievance administrator will:

- send a copy of the grievance to the respondent,
- alert management, and
- contact CeDaR for Level One of the grievance process, Restorative Justice (see Level One - Restorative Justice page).

c. Within 30 days of a grievance being referred, Restorative Justice case manager will:

- schedule and hold the Restorative Justice Orientation meeting (see Level One – Restorative Justice page).

d. Within 60 days of a grievance being referred, Restorative Justice case manager will:

- schedule and hold the first Restorative Justice meeting (see Level One – Restorative Justice page).

e. Within 30 days of a Restorative Justice meeting, the Restorative Justice case manager will:

- schedule and hold the next Restorative Justice meeting,
- until and unless the Restorative Justice meeting participants decide to close (see Level One – Restorative Justice page).

f. Within a specified time of the last Restorative Justice meeting, Respondent will:

- check in with Restorative Justice case manager monthly
- and will complete all steps agreed to in their Restorative Action Plan (see Level One – Restorative Justice page).

g. Within 15 days of the Restorative Justice group closing without agreement, grievance administrator will:

- call grievant to see if they want to close or go to Level Two, Arbitration (see Level Two – Arbitration page).

h. Within 15 days of being contacted, grievant will:

- decide whether to close grievance – or -
- move to Level Two of the grievance process, Arbitration (see Level Two – Arbitration page).

- i. Within 15 days of knowing grievant wants to move forward, grievance administrator will:
- gather a list of trained and available arbitrators who are not too close to the conflict,
 - mail out the list of arbitrators to the parties (see Level Two – Arbitration page).
- j. Within 15 days of receiving arbitrator choices, parties will:
- choose one and cross off one if there is a question of neutrality,
 - and return the choices to the grievance administrator who will send grievance form and party statements to the selected arbitrators (see Level Two – Arbitration page).
- k. Within 15 days of being selected, the two arbitrators will:
- select a lead arbitrator from the list – then -
 - alert the grievance administrator who will contact the lead arbitrator (see Level Two – Arbitration page).
- l. Within 15 days of choosing the third arbitrator, the three arbitrators will:
- schedule the arbitration hearing with the parties.
 - If they are unable to within 15 days, grievance administrator will set the date and time (see Level Two – Arbitration page).
- m. Within 30 days of choosing the third arbitrator, the arbitrators will:
- hold the arbitration hearing (see Level Two – Arbitration page).
- n. Within 15 days of the arbitration hearing, the arbitrators will:
- deliberate, decide, then give their draft decision to the grievance administrator
 - who will give it to management for operational and legal review (see Level Two – Arbitration page).
- o. Within 30 days of receiving the arbitrated draft decision for review, management will:
- complete any reviews.
 - Arbitrators will complete any revisions, so that there are no unintended legal or operational ramifications in the decision,
 - then the final decision will be sent to the grievance administrator (see Level Two – Arbitration page).
- p. Within 15 days of receiving final decision, grievance administrator will:
- send the decision of the arbitrators to the parties by certified mail, and
 - archive a copy of the decision (see Level Two – Arbitration page).
- q. Within 30 days of receiving the final decision, either party may:
- send a petition to appeal the decision to the grievance administrator,
 - entering Level Three of the grievance process, Appeal to management (see Level Three – Appeal page).
- r. Within 15 days of receiving the appeal, grievance administrator will:
- send the petition to hear the appeal to management (see Level Three – Appeal page).
- s. Within 15 days of receiving the petition to appeal, management will:
- decide whether or not to hear the appeal (see Level Three – Appeal page).

t. Within 30 days of deciding to hear the appeal, management will:

- hold an appeal hearing (see Level Three – Appeal page).

u. Within 30 days of the appeal hearing, management will:

- send their decision to the parties in writing. (See Level Three – Appeal page.)
- Please note: Management’s decision is final.

As seen here, a grievance could easily take a year if it took the maximum time to do each of these pieces, and a quarter of a year at the minimum. Therefore, all participants will do their best to accomplish their piece immediately or in a timely fashion, while staying within the time limits. Time limits are used to keep things moving forward through the process.

Click here to return home to the Process Outline.

Oregon Country Fair Grievance Form

Revised August 2020

Grievance Administrator, Oregon Country Fair
442 Lawrence St., Eugene, OR 97401
grievance@oregoncountryfair.org

Please type or print legibly and return to the grievance administrator. Thank you.

Date of filing:

Grievant contact info (please fill in completely)

Grievant's name:

Fair affiliation/crew:

Mailing address:

Email address:

Phone number and best time to call:

Respondent information
(The party you're filing against)

Respondent name:

fair affiliation/crew:

mailing address:

email address:

phone number:

Please document your grievance by providing the following information. If space is insufficient, attach additional sheets as needed.

Date grievable event occurred:

Continuing grievance? Yes or No

Location of grievance:

What section and page of OCF's Articles of Incorporation, By-Laws, Guidelines, or Code of Conduct did the respondent violate?

Please quote the exact words of the policies that were violated:

(If no written policies have been violated, your dispute can still be attended to by contacting CeDaR at CeDaR@oregoncountryfair.org for conflict coaching or mediation services.)

What was the nature of the grievance and the relevant facts? Please include an explanation about how the above written policies were violated.

In what way were you harmed by the respondent's behavior?

What have you already tried to resolve the situation and what was the result?

Have you spoken directly with the respondent (the person you're filing against)? When? What was the result of that discussion?

Did you ask for the services of CeDaR?
Please describe your experience:

Did you try to work it out informally with the help of an OCF person of authority? Yes or No

Name of authority figure:

Fair position:

Email address:

Phone number:

What ways to resolve this did you explore with the OCF leadership?

What was your experience trying to resolve it?

What remedy do you now think is best to resolve the grievance?

I affirm that this grievance is filed in good faith and that all information I have provided is true to the best of my knowledge and belief. I attest to these facts by affixing my signature below.

Grievant's Signature

Date

Please return completed form to the grievance administrator at grievance@oregoncountryfair.org or mail to OCF grievance administrator, 442 Lawrence St, Eugene, OR 97401 within 60 days of the grievable event.

The Grievance Process is published online and available at oregoncountryfair.net under the Documents Section.